MHI builds 2014 HomeAid playhouse for fundraiser

HomeAid Houston, a Greater Houston Builders Association charity, announced McGuyer Home Builders Inc. will be the 2014 builder for HomeAid's Project Playhouse, a fundraiser that raises funds for building transitional housing for Houston's homeless.

MHI will design the playhouse and construct it with the help of members from its staff and with donations from many of its vendors. The creation will be whimsically unique and loaded with amenities ideal for kids and adults of all ages.

The MHI team includes James Miller, regional president; Paul Blackburn, division president; Jason C. Gilley, project manager; Brian Grigsby, production manager; Gabe Zazueta, purchasing manager; Jamie Patterson, marketing director; Taylor Urban, architect and Jaime Virkus, marketing manager.

The playhouse will be unveiled in April with its design reflecting the 2014 Project Playhouse theme. The playhouse will be on display June 7-8 at the GHBA New Home and Remodeling Show.

From there the playhouse's final destination will be Minute Maid Park, where it will be on display during Astros' home games, June 24 through July 2.
